

Post title: Submitting and verifying a Blog Claim on Technorati using Feedburner
Author: Codex-M/ www.php-developer.org

MGQCDW3BS83U - This is my Technorati token key after submitting this blog to Technorati. If you are using Feedburner, the Technorati blog claim process is a bit of neck pain. For those of you who are using Feedburner and submitting their blog to Technorati, the following are my best advice:

- 1.) Make sure you write a new post in your blog. Put the token before the first sentence of your paragraph, such as shown previously.
- 2.) Write more than 500 words, if you write less than a few words. It won't appear in your feed!
- 3.) Publish your post containing the claim token, the most important part is that the token SHOULD appear in the feed URL content such shown in the screenshot below:

- 4.) In Feedburner you feed URL should look like <http://feeds.feedburner.com/php-developer>
- 5.) Now in your Technorati profile make sure you are using the correct Feed URL which should look like <http://feeds.feedburner.com/php-developer>
- 6.) Click the "Check Claim", if Technorati manage to find the token key , it should look like below:

- 7.) Now you should wait for some time before Technorati will approve or reject your blog.
